DETAILED ACTION

1. Claims 1-2 are pending.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1-2 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Golshani et al ("Golshani" US# 5,806,066) in view of Ripley ("Ripley" US# 6,829,606 B2).
4. As per claim 1, Golshani teaches a method comprising "receiving a selection of a data store" (Figure 4, column 4 lines 13-20 wherein a "specified subservient database system" is chosen in a manner similar to the applicant's method) "displaying a list of schemas available on the data store" (column 4 lines 21-25 and column 10 lines 53-54 wherein "a list of schema is displayed" in a manner similar to the applicant's method) "receiving a selection of one of the listed schemas" (column 4 lines 21-25 and column 10 lines 53-54 wherein "the user selects one of the schema that is considered for integration" performs the same step and is analogous) "displaying a list of tables stored in the selected schema" (column 4 lines 24-29 and column 5 lines 19-53 wherein information about relationships, attributes, primary keys, and references are stored in the schema are displayed for the user and performs the same function as a list of tables) "receiving a selection of one of the listed tables" (column 5 lines 19-53 and column 11 lines 9-14 wherein "clicking on the object classes, selecting the attribute, and selecting the type of correspondence" shows the user selecting table-equivalent data and passing it through the method, and is therefore analogous).

Golshani does not expressly teach "determining entity and property metadata associated with the selected table... generating an XML schema using the determined metadata". Ripley teaches "determining entity and property metadata associated with the selected table... generating an XML schema using the determined metadata" (Figure 5A references 540, 550, 560 and column 20 lines 20-39 wherein the table provides statistics information corresponding to entity and property metadata and "a statistics schema" is generated, using a Similarity Search Engine (SSE) employing a language based on XML, from the statistics and performs the same function). It would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to combine Ripley's method of determining metadata from tables and generating a schema from the data combined with Golshani's method of integrating schemas of distributed heterogeneous databases, specifically after receiving data on object class and attributes, to easily handle data from multiple data sources with different schemas. The motivation for doing so would be to handle data from multiple data sources in a way that the differences between various operating systems, schemas, and environments, can be dealt with to improve performance when sharing data between multiple data sources.

5. As per claim 2, Golshani teaches “displaying a list of catalogues that are available on the data store and receiving a selection of one of the catalogues” (column 4 lines 24-28 wherein the database’s “catalog of information” is retrieved by querying the system in catalog in which the schema is stored and is written into the processing system, describing the same steps and are analogous).

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Daniel et al (US# 6,785,689 B1), Dahan et al (US# 6,199,059 B1), Suver (US# 6,016,497), Subramanian et al (US# 6,915,305 B2).
